Dear family,

One misconception about Christians that tends to annoy me is that we are called to be docile, fearful, and boring people. A gospel passage like today proves the exact opposite. Both Jesus and Zacchaeus boldly take risk of various sorts for the sake of the Kingdom of God. Zacchaeus, humble in his need for God and in his contrition, does whatever he can to get the attention of Jesus. The Gospel describes Zacchaeus as “short in stature,” yet his humility and courage make him a man of grand proportions. This integrity is the reason that Jesus takes the risk in calling Zacchaeus to be his disciple. Despite the judgment and ridicule around Jesus’ decision, Our Lord knows that his heart is converting and this is the sort of minister he needs. The weight of this message could not be more profound than in our day where many risks have yet to be taken for the sake of Gospel. On our part, we must be both humble and courageous in not allowing any obstacle to keep us from communion with Our Lord and one another. For all those in leadership within the Church, be us a minister or a member of the clergy, we have to meet people where they are in our search for Our Lord. Furthermore, because one does not seemingly fit into ministry for whatever reason, we must discern whether or not a role in ministry might be just what that person needs to use their gifts for His glory and to boost their own confidence. Despite the times or the situation, whether one is defending the faith or trailblazing new paths of grace, we are all boldly called to proclaim the faith, taking the necessary risks to make His message known.

In His joy,

Rev. Fr. Daniel J. Gutierrez
